The perfect time to plant Wild garlic

Our Wild garlic plants are now ready to buy and ready to despatch.

Take the opportunity to plant now for the kitchen garden. There is still time to enjoy your own home grown Wild garlic leaves. The pretty white flowers, appear after the leaves and also edible. They look great, and are beneficial for insects too.

Each 1 litre pot you purchase contains 3 x Wild garlic plants, and if you really want an edible harvest, plant 3 x pots per m². Wild garlic can spread over time so it's ideal in a container. It will die back after flowering to reappear next year so you can easily plant something else in the container for the rest of the

- Sun or dappled shade.
- Not too dry, so water from time to time if in a container.
- Sheltered from cold winds and frosts.

Bluebell season is on the way:

Visiting a Bluebell wood in Spring makes for a lovely walk. Huge areas of Bluebells in a wood are a sure sign that you are walking through an ancient woodland, full of history.

If you'd like your own little Bluebell magic, we still have stock of our potted bluebells, but buy now so you can plant this Spring and enjoy these 3 top benefits of English bluebells:

1. Bluebells provide a beautiful, display in the garden from April - June,
2. They are an easy to grow native plant.
3. English bluebells provide a food source for pollinators through the Spring, attracting insects to your garden.

Bluebells prefer part shade, a little shelter such as under shrubs or trees and a moist soil. They will also grow well in a container or within grassland.

News from The Blooming Wild nursery:

We are now open to customers Wednesday - Saturday

The nursery is based in South Somerset and we are now open weekly until the end of October. Our range of Herbaceous perennials and Ornamental grasses blend beautifully with wildflowers to enhance the biodiversity in your garden and help create wildlife habitats across the seasons.

If you're out and about during Easter either locally in Somerset or travelling through the county why not pop in and say Hello. We will have plenty of peat free Herbaceous perennials, Grasses and Wildflowers for you to browse and choose for your garden.
