Woodland wildflowers:

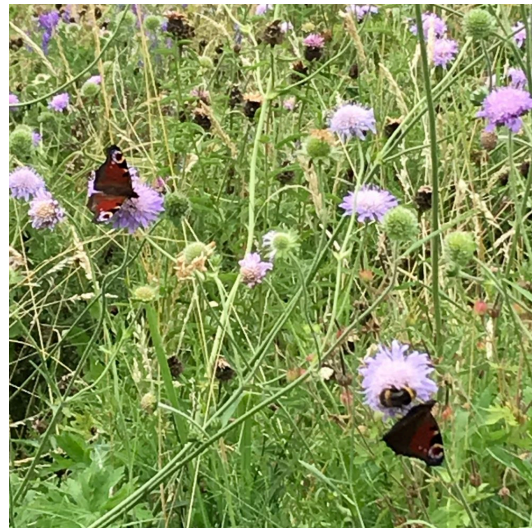

To plant in shade or part shade, a selection of wildflowers that thrive in woodland conditions.

From ferns to Field roses, cooler conditions are enjoyed by a whole variety of native plants.

Light levels are gradually increasing so plants will establish well before the full tree canopy develops.

Check out our full range in our Woodland and Shade collection.

Meadow wildflowers:

To plant within grassland or a lawn, a selection of wildflowers which enjoy full sun.

Perfect to plant at the start of May for flowers during the Summer months, to help get your garden buzzing.

Check out our range in our Meadow wildflowers collection

Cottage garden wildflowers:

To blend in a border in sun or part shade bringing pollinators and pops of colour to the garden.

Many cottage garden wildflowers are also ideal to plant in a container - there's wildflowers to suit however large or small the space may be.

As beds and borders start to fill out, it's a perfect time to add in small groups of wildflowers in any space.
